

TFFA Statement on Fuel Availability from Hurricane Beryl

JULY 11, 2024
AUSTIN, TX

The Texas Food & Fuel Association represents the wholesale and retail fuel industry in the State of Texas. TFFA understands that there are many fellow Texans experiencing delays or even unavailability in fueling at gas stations and convenience stores.

The primary delays are related to power outages and impediments such as downed power lines and trees. While telecom crews work diligently to restore power, our fuel distributor members and retail convenience store members are working equally hard to ensure that fuel is available to Texans in the affected areas.

To be very clear, there is no shortage of fuel. The issue is simply logistics, combined with long wait times at most fuel terminals in the area. TFFA will continue to work alongside the Texas Department of Emergency Management to ensure that fuel continues to be delivered as safely as possible.

About TFFA:

The Texas Food & Fuel Association is a non-profit 501(c)(6) trade association representing the retail and wholesale sectors of the oil and gas industry in Texas. Based in Austin, the association works to build consensus among industry professionals, local municipalities, state and federal governing agencies, elected officials, and others who have a vested interest in the petroleum marketing and convenience retail industries.

Recognized as the industry leader for advocacy, networking, and educational training in Texas, the association provides leadership opportunities, professional development tools, relationship building events, and knowledge sharing resources to help industry stakeholders navigate through market fluctuations and assess industry trends.
